Bringing back Giovannino's parts

And she goes to Giovanni's mother's house.

"Madam, I have your son's arm here."

"Oh, that distracted kid. I don't know what to do or say anymore."

"Eh, you know, kids are all like that."

After a while another good woman comes in.

"Madam, I found a foot. It's not your Giovannino's?"

"Of course it is, I recognize it from the shoe with the hole. Oh, what a distracted son I have. I don't know what to do or say anymore."

"Eh, you know, children are all like that."

After a while, an old lady arrives, then the baker's boy, then a streetcar driver, and even a retired schoolteacher, and they all bring some piece of Giovanni: a leg, an ear, a nose.

"But can there be a boy more absent-minded than mine?"

"Eh, ma'am, kids are all like that."
