PETERKIN AND THE UNFAILING INSTINCT OF THE ANIMALS

Just then Dr. Strobel appeared with Peterkin, his dog. „Look, Peterkin,“ said the doctor with a smile. „See, who is here! Go and say how-do-you-do to Lisa!“

Peterkin wagged his tail and trotted quickly up to the Palfy's table to say how-do-you-do to his old friend, Lisa.

When Peterkin arrived at the table, he sniffed at the little girl, turned around, and quickly trotted back to his master.

„What a stupid dog!“ Dr. Strobel complained. „Can't even recognize his best friend! Just because she's just been away in the country for a week or two. And people talk a lot of nonsense about the unfailing instinct of the animals!“

But Lottie thought to herself, „What a good thing, that doctors are not as clever as dogs!“
