MURES AND OLT BECOME RIVERS

Tarcău (tarkəu), the fairy had two sons, Mures and Olt who were quarrelling all the time. Tarcău was always sad because her sons do not love each other as brothers should and also because her husband had been banished by the king, and she should never see him again.

When they found out the reason for their mother's sadness, the boys decided to go in search of their father.

The fairy offered to turn them into running water. They would break through mountains, rocks and forests with a united force. While Tarcău went to fetch the golden rod, Olt, who was of a fierce temper, asked Mures:

'Whose name do you think we're travelling under? '

'Who is the elder among us? Of course, that we travel under my name.' Mures answered.

'It is true that you are the elder, but I am the quicker. You're the oldest, but I'll not ride under your name!' Olt said.

'You're faster than me, but I'm not going under your name either.'

'If not, we'll go our separate ways. I show you that I see my father before you!'

'Go on then' said Mures, 'I will take the round roads quietly, as our mother told us.'
