THE BIG LESSON

His mother got very sad and she left the palace and went back to their old, small house. People started to lose their interest in him because of his pride and bad behavior. He had changed since he got rich. He never helped people, even the ones who were his friends. And soon people started saying that Kelolan used to be a better person when he was not rich but now no one likes the new spoiled Keloglan. But Keloglan wouldn't care about what people were saying about him. He was just thinking about having more and more money.

One day Keloglan came to the edge of the river "Gold does not finish, my palace is old now. I want a bigger one. I can build another bigger palace here, too. It is better to have the new palace near the river so I won't have to go for a long walk to bring the golds" he thought.

He took out the magical bowl and at that moment his magical copper bowl in his hand fell into the water. Keloglan jumped into the river to catch it, but Keloglan was not a good swimmer and he nearly drowned. He was able to rescue himself after sometime, but during this time, no one was worried about what happened to Keloglan and no one went to help him, also thieves had stolen all his golds. Keloglan cried and went back to his home, he felt lonely and miserable. He told his mother what happened on the edge of the river and how he lost the magical copper bowl and the thieves had stolen all his gold and the way no one cared about him when he needed them.

"Don't worry, my bald son, my dear son, that magical copper bowl was not yours in the first place. You did not gain it by your work and effort. Besides, you were very spoiled and proud. Leave it. You will be happier like this. Money is not everything."

There are more important things than money. Although you had lots of money but on the other side you lost all you had before, like kindness, friendship, respect and happiness. Remember that you shouldn't change your personality if you get rich again one day." his mother said. Keloglan was comforted by his mother and found what his mother said was right. He decided to be a better person and tried his best to have a good life. He became friend with people again and always helped them when they needed him. Once again, he was loved by everyone, and he had a good life with his mom.
