THE VICTORY

The ants built a big palace and throne for Sultan of Elephant. The ants started working under the orders of the Sultan of Elephant. However, the ants forgot their own identities and started to act like elephants.

One day, a song from far away was heard. This song helped the ants remember their past. The ants remembered their freedom and equality and rebelled against the Sultan of Elephant.

The ants wanted to continue the war, but when this news reached the Sultan of Elephant, he became very angry. He wanted to punish the ants and their leader, Red-Bearded Lane Ant.

The elephants defeated the ants in the battle and destroyed their homes. Red-Bearded Lane Ant saved the survivors and sheltered them. But when the song was heard again, the ants gathered and started making plans. Nothing could stop them. 'We can't be Sultan's slaves anymore.' Ants were saying 'We want freedom'. They were very smart and didn't want to fight this time; they wanted to use the elephants' weak point.

Elephants were so big, so they were not good at seeing small objects and finding hidden things. So, the ants decided to get prepared for the war under the ground. This time ants started digging tunnels underground.

Firstly they needed houses and secondly they had a good plan to defeat the elephants. The ants decided to destroy the last hope of the Sultan of Elephant. They worked tirelessly without giving up. They continued to dig tunnels secretly and built their homes. These tunnels were so deep and hidden that the Sultan of Elephant and his army wouldn't notice. 'We are ants, we are strong' Red-Bearded Lane Ant, the leader of the ants, kept singing to boost their courage.

Everyone worked together and hid in their homes. They finally finished. The big day has come. Red-Bearded Lame Ant, the leader of the ants, decided to go to the Sultan of Elephant. When he arrived at the Sultan of Elephant's palace, Ulukepez welcomed him at the door. Ulukepez wanted to invite Red-Bearded Lame Ant inside, but he was cautious and didn't want to go in. Red-Bearded Lame Ant bravely called out the Sultan of Elephant. 'Sultan! Come out if you dare.' The Sultan of Elephant came out, thinking he would defeat the ants one last time. But Red-Bearded Lame Ant told the Sultan of Elephant that the ants had declared war. The Sultan of Elephant became very angry and ordered an attack on the ants. He also ordered the capture of Red-Bearded Lame Ant. Red Bearded Lame Ant went to the forest. The army following him, hoping to catch him and the other ants. But the ants had made a clever plan. They had prepared large pits by digging under the forest. The hoopoes and other elephants fell into these pits, and they were all defeated.

When the news reached the Sultan of Elephant, he was so angry that he made a big jump. But this jump made the ground shake. While the ants were digging under their own homes, they had also dug under the Sultan of Elephant's palace. As a result, the Sultan of Elephant and Ulukepez were trapped under the collapsed palace, too.

All the ants were happy. 'Victory' they were shouting 'We are ants' singing. The ants won the victory and were now free. They lived happily and safely in the forest.
